

Great Gorgas Geocache

Description: This activity requires those involved to Geocache. Geocaching is an activity that involves using latitude and longitude coordinates and a hand-held GPS (or mobile device) to find hidden objects. Not only does it get your students active and moving, but it also supplements the content they will learn with the application of their geographic knowledge (latitude/longitude/GPS). Geocaching Activity
Answer Guide/Geocache Stuffers

Geocache #1:

Congratulations! You have found your first geocache. You are now standing at what once served as the Gorgas well house. Indoor plumbing was not standard until the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Thus, many people used outdoor wells for their water supply. Can you imagine what it would be like to have to go outside to get the water with which you were going to bathe, wash, or cook? What inventions led to the modern conveniences we have today in regards to water? After writing your answers on the back of your geocache activity worksheet, you may move on to the next. Those coordinates are:

33.21258 N
87.54745 W

Geocache #2:

Congratulations! You have found your second geocache. You are now standing in the front yard of the Gorgas House. It may not seem like a special location, but it truly is! From where you are standing, you could have had front row seats to one of the most significant Alabama moments of the Civil War. In 1865, Union soldiers burned the University of Alabama campus to the ground, sparing only four buildings (including the Gorgas House). Much of what you now see in front of you was rebuilt after the Civil War. War affects communities in many different aspects. List five ways in which war affects society. How do you think war today affects society differently than it did during the Civil War? After writing your answer on the back of your geocache activity worksheet, you may move on to the next. Those coordinates are:

33.21245 N
87.54756 W

Geocache #3:

Congratulations! You have found your third geocache. You are now standing at the historic marker for the Gorgas House. As the first building of the University of Alabama, the Gorgas House contains a great deal of history. Please read over the historic marker and consider why the Gorgas House was deemed worthy of that honor. In your opinion, what makes certain events, people, and places in history worth remembering? For what would you like to be remembered? After writing your answers on the back of your geocache activity worksheet, you may move on to the next. Those coordinates are:

33.21255 N
87.54755 W

Geocache #4:

Congratulations! You have found your fourth geocache. You are now standing on the porch of the Gorgas House. While the original house contained a porch, it was later remodeled by Robert Hardaway, an engineering professor at the University, as a gift to the Gorgas family. He believed Amelia Gorgas should have a proper, Southern-style porch for hosting and entertaining. Think of the many types of architecture you have seen throughout your lifetime, maybe in books, magazines, on television, or online. How does Southern-style architecture differ from that of other places you have seen? After writing your answer on the back of your geocache activity worksheet, you may move on to the next. Those coordinates are:

33.2152 N

87.54776 W

Geocache #5:

Congratulations! You have found the fifth and final geocache. You are now standing by what once was the University post office run from the Gorgas House main floor. Mrs. Amelia G. Gorgas served as postmistress during the pony-delivered mail days. All University mail was delivered to the Gorgas House, and Amelia Gorgas made sure it was distributed and delivered to the proper recipients. Correspondence is done in so many forms and fashions now. How has communication changed since the days of the Gorgas post office? Provide examples. After writing your answers on the back of your geocache activity worksheet, you may submit your paper.
